6. For each grouped candidate, the votes column shows:

- the number of votes obtained by each candidate at a polling place, facility or declaration vote type. The ticket votes shown for each group are counted as first preferences for the first candidate in the group. Therefore to calculate the total first preferences the first candidate in each group has obtained at that polling place, facility or declaration vote type, you must add the ticket votes for the group to the votes shown against the candidates name
- the total number of 'ordinary' votes obtained by each candidate at a polling place, facility or declaration vote type
- the total number of votes obtained by each candidate for that division

Table Help

Results for a Count or Set of Counts

Each table shows a series of counts divided into cells, with each cell representing a distinct stage of the scrutiny. Preferences distributed when a candidate is excluded may be distributed over several counts, as an unsuccessful candidate may have received ballot papers at several different transfer values, and a separate count is conducted for ballot papers at each transfer value. When a candidate is excluded over several counts, the result of the exclusion is summarised and shown as a single column in one cell. The result of a bulk exclusion of several candidates at once is similarly shown in one cell.

Table Help

Loss or Gain by Fraction

A loss by fraction arises because the multiplication process applied to give ballot papers their correct transfer value often results in fractional remainders which are required to be rounded downwards, thus producing a decrease in the total number of votes transferred or distributed to continuing candidates.

In the same way it is possible to have a gain by fraction, which is shown as a negative figure in the 'Loss by Fraction' row.

Table Help

Exhausted Votes

In the count of Senate ballot papers, there are ballot papers which show no further valid preference for any candidate and must, therefore, be set aside from the count.

An exhausted vote occurs when there are 10 or more candidates and there are numbers in at least 90% of the squares next to the candidates names, which form a sequence of consecutive numbers beginning with the number 1, without repetition or omission, or numbers which would be such a sequence with changes to not more than three of them.

This means that where there are twenty candidates, a ballot paper would be informal if it did not have on it either the numbers 1 to 18 (90% of 20) without repetitions or omissions, or numbers which, if up to three of them were changed, would be the numbers 1 to 18 without repetitions or omissions, once counted would be considered an exhausted vote.

It should be understood that the changes referred to are only notional changes and that ballot papers are not altered to ensure formality. In the event of a number in the sequence being omitted or repeated the ballot paper is exhausted at that point.

The candidate whose votes are being distributed has a minus figure in this column which is equal to the total votes available for distribution at this count. The votes can be surplus votes where a candidate has been elected and has a surplus over the quota; or all the votes a candidate has where that candidate has been excluded.
10. The progressive total of votes for each candidate, 'Exhausted' and 'Loss by Fraction' after the current transfer/distribution of votes is completed.
11. The 'Exhausted Votes' are those votes that are incapable of transfer to continuing candidates due to breaks in the sequence of preferences shown on the ballot papers.
